

China's Economic Reforms & Globalization

Agricultural Economics &
International Studies 539

Spring 2009

Instructor: Prof. Ian Sheldon
Time: MW 12:30-2:18 PM
Location: Room 056, University Hall
Call #: 00279-1
Credits: 5

China's economic reforms have been a success story in economic development. China is a fascinating country in terms of learning about its social and economic structures, and its role and emerging influence on the world economy.

This course introduces China's economic reform strategies and development transformation during the last 30 years. The main topics include China's economic and social institutions since the Mao era, China's resource base and economic institutions, the mix of market and socialist systems, agricultural and rural development, population and demographics, and the political economy of China's reforms, globalization and its accession to the World Trade Organization.

Prerequisites: Ag Econ 200 or Econ 200.

MADE IN CHINA