

Department of Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics (AEDE) at the Farm Science Review

Here are some of the highlights of AEDE Faculty and Staff's time at the 2023 Farm Science Review, held Sept 19 – 21.

Using a ring-toss quiz about Agricultural, Environmental, and Development Economics, AEDE faculty and staff engaged with students and the community.

Unleash your potential in the Agribusiness and Applied
Economics Major (AAE)

How do you want

Learn how you can help shape the future of our:

- Food systems
- Agricultural policy
- Communities
- Environment

- Follow your specialization
- Agricultural
 - Agribusiness
 - Agribusiness
 - Agricultural
 - Marketing
 - Applied Eco

aede.osu

HOMEGROWN

THIS IS MY CROP

adidas

Turn your passion
into problem-solving AEDE

IONS

ARE WELL-PREPARED:

duates months graduates ent
Ohio
ing salary graduate

AEDE student Morgan Meyer, AEDE Academic Advisor Kassie Kurzhals, and AEDE faculty member Dr. Anna Parkman also spoke with students at the AEDE booth.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

COLLEGE OF FOOD, AGRICULTURAL, AND ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCES

AEDE Agribusiness and Applied Economics major Morgan Meyer connected with students while asking trivia questions in the ring-toss.

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF FOOD, AGRICULTURAL AND ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCES

Ask the Expert

AEDE faculty gave several talks at the "Ask the Expert" booth.

AEDE faculty member Dr. Ani Katchova presented on “How are Ohio Farms are Doing Financially”.

AEDE faculty (from left to right) Dr. Brent Sohngen, Dr. Seungki Lee, Dr. Margaret Jodlowski, and Dr. Ian Sheldon held a panel to discuss “The Farm Bill and Beyond.”

AEDE faculty answered questions regarding their outlook on this year's Farm Bill and its potential impacts in the U.S. and beyond.

The Agribusiness Club's president, Ryanna Tietje, sold t-shirts and concession food as the Club's fundraiser.

AEDE faculty and staff enjoy this annual event and hope to encourage more people to attend in the future.